Ugandan these days have a tendency of being so self involved. I mean can anyone argue that they are having a rougher time in Europe than many people are having in Uganda? At least in Britain they have free medical care. Right now I'm thinking about last summer when I visited my aunt in a village in Uganda. I won't say she is poor, because with a spirit like hers no one can be. But her environment is far from ideal. Yet all the time she was trying to do for me, to give me, to love me. Yeah, that's it; I think hiding is a symptom of love gone bad.

This is very sad!!!

I now get a superb picture as of why many of our "friends" especially from Europe do not want to make surprise visits. They quest for great details which in many instances sounds very disrespectful.....but i guess experience is the best teacher!

Wait a minute though, the reserve is true in the USA in many places ...people love to welcome new people from Uganda, it's a grand opportunity for cheap labor.

The now considered to be Ugandan-Americans will educate and preach to you about how Americans work so hard;

you then decide to work twice as hard to please your 'host' who in this case is your only contact. They set all these rules around you and at the end of the day..you are not paid for over months...you have been injecting your hardwork into their mortgage payments....utilities etc.

A Ugandan lady in Minnesota will pay you $25 a week when you tirelessly work your week away with her ,and that's after she deducts all your so called "incurred bills" in many cases which they are fixed to her....

This then becomes a 'chicken and egg' kind of thing.

Abandoning folks or enslaving them?

The only good side I see in this misery is thatwhen you hide from people or enslave them, they will spring up somewhere or another anyway...

Let us be caring people fellow Ugandans in the diaspora..seek for help if you need it.....

The biggest problem with all this enslaving and hiding, is that the children are watching, and learning. And if mom and dad take them to church on Sunday, where they will be taught the opposite of what is practised at home, then you'll get them all confused. It's like a boomerang. We all understand the papers could be a problem, and spending on a newcomer might not fit on one's program, naye ekisa ekitagaana kizaala obulimba.

Angiebe, that MN woman who paid her assistants $25 a week, how did she expect them to live on that in the UK. What kind of absolute meanness is that?
