Zimbabwe falling to pieces, does anyone care?

With inflation at 100,000 percent, unemployment at over 80 percent and a life expectancy at 36 years of age, the reign of Robert Mugabe, like most of our leaders has been so merciless. Somehow, an election got called. The result will be easy to figure out - Mugabe will win, and if he doesn't win he will beat some people up and call it a win. On the outside chance that the MDC pulls this off, the well dressed Bob will call them lots of names and probably say that Tsvangirai is more pro-American (which may be true), these are fighting words to them.

What will happen if Mugabe starts killing 50.5 percent of the population? My guess is, check Zimbabwe's natural resource reserves – if they are pretty low I guess then the population is pretty much left to be gunned down by Mugabe's thugs. Bob is a dictator, and things like banning the press and roughing up the party opposite will stimulate anything but a sigh. What do you think, does anyone care?:(

If Mugabe has won the election, then, what is it that is stopping them from announcing the results??

AND YET, their roads in the capital city, are clean. No potholes!! Zimbabwe roads are in fact very good, compared to those of some country in the region.

The rest is history. If you want to go shopping (what a joke!), you would need a wheelbarrow or hire a taxi to carry the money. The inflation in that country is another joke.

Mugabe is fighting the peoples will---its not easy to fight a determined people the oposition won but they are very careful not to make mistakes, that will be used by the armed forces as an excuse to mishandle them thats why the results are delayed in anticpetation of reaction---but the opposition is doing it well.

The caring ones are helpless. The ones with the capacity to help have decided to keep a blind eye watching and a deaf ear hearing. The end will justify the means as usual. Africa teli ayamba. CRY THE BELOVED CONTINENT.
